

Dry Your Eyes

A Life Divided

Tell me how I should get along without your smile
Or fall asleep without your breath by my side
I lived for nothing, but you...

And tell me how I should find a way out if this chaotic mind
Without you showing me wrong from right
And I ever needed was you

[Chorus]

She said, dry your crying eyes
I'm ready for whatever comes
I know there is something waiting on the other side

No, I can't find a meaning in the way things collide
When you're not giving the time to complete your ride
I could never live without you

Why can't I turn all your burden and your pain into mine?
Take off your cross instead of walking beside
I don't live to live without you, without you

[Chorus]

"She said, dry your crying eyes"
"I'm ready for whatever comes"
"I know there is something waiting on the other side"
"She said, don't you worry, child?"
"Someday we have to let go"
"But we'll meet again for sure, when the time is ripe"

When nothing's alright...
...why does the whole world pretend that it's fine?
...why does the sun still light up the sky?
...how could they all get back to everyday lives?

[Chorus 2]

She said, dry your crying eyes
I'm ready for whatever comes
I know there is something waiting on the other side
She said, don't you worry, child?
Someday we have to let go
But we'll meet again for sure, when the time is ripe
