

The Last Existence

Ador Dorath

Death is the last evidence of your own existence. Death is the final word; death is the end of world. Death is the last reality, the final necessity. Death is the only truth, death is the only fact. I want to believe that you are watching me from somewhere. I want to believe that it was you the other day I had a glimpse of. I want to believe that it was you telling me not to worry. No to be afraid of death.

Every day I see you again. Living and dead, so unreal. Waking up I still think you are here. Dead or somehow living. I can't forget your eyes shut. I can't forgive you let me here. With all those words I wanted to tell you. With all those words I wanted to hear.

Don't be afraid someone said. Every death is only preparing you to your own end.

It is very calm indeed, as we abandon the world. Every day I see you again...

It is a part of me that is leaving with every death. Every time I'm becoming less alive.

Death is the last evidence of your own existence. Death is the final word; death is the end of world.

It is a part of me that is leaving with every death. Every time I'm becoming less alive.

Death is the only truth, death is the only fact. Death is the final word; death is the end of world.