They're coming 'round again. I've returned and they've been wai ting.

Their aged offererings received and returned, passed through we t eyes.

I tremble as I feel them rolling in for, my sins, the old ghost s know

So chilling as I feel them mourn within my soul. As the mournin g grows.

Unfold before me. Turn back the page again.

Twenty four hours spent wishing that the day was never ending. Shadows of glory shading my heart again.

Recall the summer when I left my heart to cool beneath the shad ows I'm coming 'round again.

I've returned and no one's waiting.

I strain my eyes to see but it's so hard to read the old tags o n the fallen walls.