

Crashing Down

American Steel

passion overcomes reason again drunk clarity amid such desperation running around the wharf with you seven blankets and we're still freezing half to death somehow i'm still managing this smile in my life i keep trading future pain for this moment's passion this time i hoped things could last a light longer separation...your issues destroy my heart again there is no absolution cause really there is no fault only a drunk confused anger i must destroy before our friendship gets torn apart i know there's not enough hope and there's too much anger i know there's no one you trust you have so much anger i don't care that everything keeps crashing down for every low a companion high i'm staying positive don't want to live with bitterness i'm not going to waste my youth not going to waste this life