Down the Slopes of Death

Amon Amarth

Down the slopes of death he rides The eight hooves pound like drums Darkness reigns the crumbling sky Invasion has begun

Fields of flames greets his eye
He smells the fear and pain
Of dying men in agony
It can drive a man insane

All enemies flee his spear No bow nor axe do harm Allfather rides out on fields of fear When Heimdal sounds the alarm

But on the field waits his fate Foretold in ancient times A beast with sharp yellow teeth And hateful burning yes

Today he'll draw his final breath
The wisest God of all
His son will avenge his death
Iormundr's brother will fall

He knows now what is to come No use to try and run What is to be, let it be done! What is to be, let it be done!

Today he'll draw his final breath The wisest God of all His son will avenge his death Iormundr's brother will fall

Down the slopes of death he rides The eight hooves pound like drums Darkness reigns the crumbling sky Invasion has begun

Down the slopes of death he rides The eight hooves pound like drums Darkness reigns the crumbling sky No more is the sun
