Prediction of Warfare

Amon Amarth

Ships were prepared Weapons and shields Sails were raised We headed out to sea!

Norway disappeared in the east Our journey had begun Helpful winds gave us our speed Under a warming sun

Heading to the emerald land A fleet of 50 ships An army of two thousand men lead by the king

On the horizon dark clouds arose Thor rode across the black clouds As the night rolled in over us We felt the wrath of the storm

That night I was haunted by dreams An omen, of what was to come The serpent arose from the sea

Ready to strike
With hammer in hand
The serpent in pain,
twisting in furious rage!
Fought for its life
The serpent escaped
Thor was in rage
My dreams began to fade

Woke from dreams
Sword in my hand
The break of dawn
We were closing in on Irish land
Time to attack
Grabbed our shields
We came ashore
And saw the waiting horde

The fight was short and deadly intense The Irish fought us well But as we gained the upperhand Their fighting spirit quelled

Ready to strike
With swords in our hands
They struggle with heart
The Irish fell to our wrath
Fought for his life
Their king escaped
With fury divine
King Olaf threw his sword