

Who Can Save Them

Anette Olzon

Look at the world, how can it be the place I leave behind?
Leaving behind to my child
See the world through distant
I saw, see the world divided
Torn to pieces by our hands

Seen from a child, born in a time
When the world was safe and sound
Doors all unlocked, no fear of crime

See the world through children's eyes
Their eyes are filled with sadness
Were we clueless to their signs?

Who can save them? Who's to blame?
Who can it be? Left with shame
Seek the answers, set things straight
Solve it now, it's soon too late

See shattered homes, broken in two
See a child outside alone
Alone in the world, what can you do?

See the world through children's eyes
Their eyes are filled with sadness
Were we clueless to their signs?

Who can save them? Who's to blame?
Who can it be? Left with shame
Seek the answers, set things straight
Solve it now, it's soon too late

Trade money for weapons, cashing on their war
Little I scream, more, more, more
When will it stop? When we'll have no more tears to cry
Where will you drop? When the blood in your veins is dry

Who can save them? Who's to blame?
Who can it be? Left with shame
Seek the answers, set things straight
Solve it now, it's soon too late
Seek the answers, set things straight
Solve it now, it's soon too late

Trade money for weapons, cashing on their war
Little I scream, more, more, more
