Heaven Is Here

Anne Murray

Just a kiss at the end of an evening When the lights are turned down low One kiss leads to another Someone whispers, "Darling, don't go"

Heaven is here, can't you see? These are the things love is made of And will always be

It's late but there's no thought of leavin'
For tomorrow seems so far away
The night you found courage to tell him
Things you found out to tell him today

Heaven is here, can't you see? These are the things love is made of And will always be

As you leave down the hallway, you're whistling Some strange melody you never knew And it won't leave your head As you climb into bed, no matter what you do

Heaven is here, can't you see?
These are the things love is made of
And will always be
These are the things love is made of
And will always be
