The Lake

Antony and the Johnsons

In youth's spring, it was my lot
To haunt of the wide earth a spot
To which I could not love the less
So lovely was the loneliness
Of a wild lake, with black rock bound
And the tall trees that towered around

But when the night had thrown her pall Upon that spot as upon all And the wind would pass me by In its stilly melody

My infant spirit would awake To the terror of the lone lake My infant spirit would awake To the terror of the lone lake

Yet that terror was not fright
But a tremulous delight
And a feeling undefined
Springing from a darkened mind
Death was in that poisoned wave
And in its gulf a fitting grave
For him who thence could solace bring
To his dark imagining
Whose wildering thought could even make
An Eden of that dim lake

But when the night had thrown her pall Upon that spot as upon all And the wind would pass me by In its stilly melody

My infant spirit would awake To the terror of the lone lake My infant spirit would awake To the terror of the lone lake

Springing from a darkened mind So lovely was the loneliness In youth's spring, it was my lot In its stilly melody An Eden of that dim lake An Eden of that dim lake Lone, lone, lonely...
