

She always does what she is told
She speeds up to reach her parents' house
The school has been closed this afternoon
But as she walks through the door

Oh suddenly the bombs start to fall
She starts to run like hell through the hall
The noise gets louder and she crawls
But everything goes dark

Night has just drowned the day
All hope is fading away

She slowly steps out of the rubble
She starts staggering into the street
The smoke blinds her eyes and dries her lips
But she needs to get away from there
And as she flees the death

Oh suddenly a voice starts to call
Then appears her mother and she falls
She tries to lean against a wall
But everything goes dark

I'd like to live one more day
Rejecting my fears, holding back my tears
No matter, no matter the God I pray
Anger runs in my veins, desolation remains

Everything goes dark
Bombs soaring through the sky
Nothing to do but cry
Everything goes dark
Is this not damnation?
Anytime for salvation ?
