

Room 138

Asking Alexandria

On my back, breathing heavy, staring at the light
Praying this ain't the end, but pretty sure it might be
On my back, got my heart beating out of my chest
I never thought, can't believe that I'd go out like this

So these are the walls that have to hold this moment
I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this

My ribs are breaking, I swear, I'm only 23
Crawling, searching for a lifeline I just can't reach
Somebody hear me, someone open up the door
Get me up off of this floor and stop the shaking, the shaking

The blood is boiling in my veins
Oh God, the pain! It's unrelenting
I'm ready for the end
If it means that all of this will end

So these are the walls that have to hold this moment
I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this

Through the haze I saw a face
A second chance, another life to live
How did you forgive me?
Held my head against your chest
Told me everything's alright, don't be afraid
Close your eyes and rest

Through the haze I saw a face
A second chance, another life to live
How did you forgive me?
Held my head against your chest
Told me everything's alright, don't be afraid

So these are the walls that have to hold this moment
I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this

Please pull me out of this
Please pull me out of this