She might cry herself to sleep tonight You might act like everything feels alright I might bite my lip, like the silent type You might make a fist, like you trying to fight Got ghosts that haunt that home And if you didn't want that known then don't put it on a throne You separate the foe from the friend by the showmanship And the bones that don't bend So now I'm studying your moves like You the only one that knew how to do right Present it with a sleeve of success Like we all benefit if you achieve and progress Maybe you're right maybe I'm just left but Unless you walk a flight in my steps but Unless you slept a night in my nest You shouldn't waste your breath to criticize my mess

I love you like a brother

Even though I'm not your brother

We all got a few flaws

But let's try not to get too lost in the applause

I love you like a sister

Even though you're not my sister

We all got a few flaws

But let's try not to get too lost

Used to be rock, but now it's roll

Looking at the clock and the remote control The circle contracts till you all alone I put that on the people you've outgrown And maybe it was all for show But it was so convincing that the ground got cold I guess anything's possible, under a spotlight we all got a note to hold It goes Don't throw no stones if you're living in a fish bowl Blow a kiss though Where the aim is based on which way the wind floats And pride is a bottle on a fence post I keep the shoes laced up In case the people I love come to shoot the place up I know we ain't cut from the same cloth But a lot of those fights were just to say we fought The mother turns, life is fragile The struggle burns from inside of the candle It doesn't matter how far you run from it, you're still gonna find it You come from it And even though we all equivalent We gotta, hold on to the differences We gotta, stand up for what we won't fall for Let's give a round of applause for All of all of y'all

I love you like a brother

Even though I'm not your brother

We all got a few flaws

But let's try not to get too lost in the applause

I love you like a sister

Even though you're not my sister We all got a few flaws But let's try not to get too lost