

Break Out

Audrey Horne

There's a man who's blissfully content with the fact that he's the only one
Who can calm the storm that's raging in her head
She's been calling names and splitting hair
Curse the world for being so unfair
Locked her heart inside a box under the bed

In a cardboard box of madness
All your secrets are safe

So break out
Break the chain and break out

All is fair in love and war, she put an axe right through the bedroom door
Now the walls are sticky, crimson red, and warm
She said no one really understood because deep, deep down, she was truly good
But there's only so much pushback she can take

In a cardboard box of madness
All your secrets are safe
Spill your heart, show me your madness
All your secrets are safe with me

Right where you wanted me, that is where I will be found
Oh yeah
Inside this circus of chaos where up turns to down
Oh no, oh no

So break out
Break the chain and break out
Break out
Break the chain and break out

Break out
