

Learning To Live Without You

Barry Manilow

And so I make the bed
And set the clock and lock the door
There's things I still forget
The little things you did before

I still can't fall asleep
And I still don't understand
But I'm learning to live without you
And I'm doing the best I can

I'm going out again
And spending time with friends you knew
I'm laughing now and then
And trying things you taught me to

I miss you just as much
And I wish I loved you less
But I'm leaning to live without you
And I'm doing ok I guess

I'm stronger every day
I may not look that way right now
I don't what to say
It's harder than I thought somehow

I know that I'll get by
And I know it just takes time
But this leaning to live without you
God it's driving me out of my mind
