All of my mouth was kissing him Now, into the air, I am missing him Is this excess texting a blessing? Two music nerds obsessing

He reminds me of the love in me I'm celebrating on a viral sea Sending each other MP3s Falling in love to a song

This handsomest of recommend He asked if I could wait for him Now, how many lightyears is interim While I fall in love with his songs?

His hands are good in protecting me Touching and carressing me Well, would it be trespassing Wanting him to be blissing me? Probing in and out of his ears

Lift under like suspension
My longing has formed its own skeleton
Bridging the gap between singletons
Sending each other's these songs

The interior of these melodies
Is perhaps where we are meant to be
Our physical human fantasies
I just fell in love with his song

So, I reserve my own intimacies
Abandon 'em all in packages
My woe and longing are too visceral
Did I just fall in love with him?
