Bruce Cockburn

Stained Glass

Small windows Looking outward Show me a sequined sky Rubies shine in my glass of wine

Dusk breezes On oiled water Paint a pointillist facade It's ceaselessly shifting world --

Like today I'm far away I see your face behind each time-blurred pane

Strings vibrate Music leaps out In a shimmering intrigue Words unsaid whirl away like dust

From the sidewalk-sweeper's broom Across a fold in space you touch my hand