

Love Stories Never Have Endings

callahan

This is the tale of a girl
How her love consumed my world
And how it all played out
It started out

We got a strange shooter with the best intentions
A little off target
But life's a lesson
And no one's claiming to be perfect

We fell in love one summer night
Made out until the sunrise
And I'm just praying there's tomorrow
And if a thing or twos get misconstrued
Along the way...

I'm sorry
I know I'm stacked with imperfections
Compelled by love and misdirection
So you know
Should one day, I'll break out of this small town
Just say your words
I'll turn this car around
And drive until it breaks down....

Listen close
I hope you get the message through
Six months of lessons
You're my only one
And we've just begun
Every Sunday night we would Fight to make this right
Can you come over now?
Let's sort this out
I tried to make the best of this
For as long as I could give the best of me
I guess in time we'll see

I'm sorry
I know I'm stacked with imperfections
Compelled by love and misdirection
So you know
Should one day, I'll break out of this small town
Just your words
I'll turn this car around
And drive until it breaks down

The most absurdly of thieves coupled with honorable intentions
Aim to sweep you off your feet
Into a bed of reinvention
Something much more fitting of these times

So let the ocean bring its wrath
Until we own intent to drown
I'll find it as a blanket, inside
Together we are bound
And I still smell you in my clothes

Feel your fingers in my hair
Long after this song's over I'll still need you here...
