

Against the Tide

Celldweller

I finally get what you've been saying
Now that went in deep side by side
This storm clouds are circling above us
As we struggle against the tide

I feel your grip firm on my shoulder
But this fear in my head won't subside
They patiently circle around us
As we hold out

Oh father why have they forsaken me?
You warned me that they would because it's passing down the bloodline it's spoken and misunderstood
We're losing thy
The strength of will
The dark and depths beginning still
And we hold on against the tide

"We leave the storm you're left to fight alone
Remember son you're reaping what you've sown
Another way isn't sinking like a stone
I'm sorry son you're reaping what you've sown"

"We leave the storm you're left to fight alone
Remember son you're reaping what you've sown
Another way isn't sinking like a stone
I'm sorry son you're reaping what you've sown"
(You're right I was your son)

You're reaping what you've sown
(You're right I was your son)

You're reaping what you've sown
(You're reaping what you've sown)

Slowly losing ground
And hope is harder to maintain
We know the prayers we prayed
We're lost like tears in the rain
The water is pulling down
We're losing lips in the sun
The ending that we knew would come
Has finally begun
It's finally begun

I'm reaping what you've sown
You're reaping what you've sown

This sorrow, ways down on my shoulders
This fears getting harder to hide
You'll leave me alone in this darkness
Left to hold out
Against the tide
