While My Lady Sleeps

Chet Baker

The Moon will rise but all in vain For there's no use in shining While my lady sleeps

The breeze will sing a sad refrain Because her heart is pining While my lady sleeps

Starlight and moonlight and amorous melody wasted What can they mean when I'm yearning for kisses never tasted?

The night may hold a million dreams
But when her eyes discover, Just a lonely lover
She will hurry on, with a sigh to the dawn
While the willow tree weeps, and my lady sleeps.

Starlight and moonlight and amorous melody wasted What can they mean when I'm yearning for kisses never tasted?

The night may hold a million dreams
But when her eyes discover, Just a lonely lover
She will hurry on, with a sigh to the dawn
While the willow tree weeps, and my lady sleeps.
