Save Your Scissors

City and Colour

So go on And I will refrain And I'll keep on running this neverending race maybe next time will be the right time and maybe next time will be your time

So save your scissors For someone else's skin My surface is so tough I don't think the blade will dig in Save your strength Save your wasted time There's no way that I want you to be left behind Go on save your scissors Save your scissors

So why does it always seem That every time I turn around Sombody falls in love with me This has never been my sole intention And I have never claimed to have patents on such inventions

Just save your scissors For someone else's skin My surface is so tough I don't think the blade will dig in Save your strength Save your wasted time There's no way that I want you to be left behind Go on save your scissors Save your scissors

There is something that I must confess to you tonight To you tonight And that is I expect nothing less from you tonight From you tonight

Go on save your scissors Save your scissors Save your scissors
