

No Reason

City Lights

As I walk through my front door
The first time in a while
Empty spots where the pictures were
Remind me of a time
When things were different
And I felt alive

Every time I try to find my place
There's only empty space
In this house of stone
It's been too long since I've felt home
I've got no reason to stay
Something different about the smell
Since you took your perfume
All alone on an empty couch
Surrounded by the room
That's where you promised
Things would never change

There's a message in the kitchen
On the grocery list
That says "pick up a bottle of wine"
I forget what it feels like
To be wrapped up
In everything normal with you
