Motherless Child

Every last blind pulled when I walk down the street. The only sound I hear is my tired heartbeat. Sometimes I feel just like a motherless child.

This place once had a name. The people once had faces. In every town I find it's the same sad situation. Sometimes I feel just like a countryless man.

My father tried to break me, my mother she tried to raise, The county correct me from my wild ways.

I once saw figures about a mile off. So I waited in the woods until they were gone. Sometimes I feel just like a wandering dog.

My father tried to break me, my mother she tried to raise, The county correct me from my wild ways.
