They're closing in I feel their breath I cannot live without the secrets of my past Their scent is strong my will is weak They read my mind I cannot hide Kill my sorrow I could die tomorrow If you don't forgive me, my heart is still in me I run through the night and leave neon-trails My fluorescent blood shines through my skin My heart is a beacon they're homing in From probing tongues or eager lips I brace myself from their fingertips They touch my skin my shield is down My eyes are black My darkness is back Kill my sorrow my soul isn't borrowed So please forgive me, the trackers have set me free