Distance and Meaning

And like that heart that got in the way I'll become the lost cause The child of burden and rage Like the distance in your touch Like the years we burned down I heard that phone call The hesitation, the ackward silence I felt everything in those seconds Splinters of sentence and heartless advice Nothing's changed but these days entwined Converge