

The Loneliest One

Count Raven

This night the stars are closer to the winters moon
I can't understand that the earthlings are still in gloom
I have to ask you a question people!
Do you care about anything at all?

What is running through your mind
When did you leave yourself behind
The beast he will gladly feast
On your soul that you never missed

I can't understand this paradox we're living in
Out here all is clear, while civilization are built in sin
Force them into cages and they tell sweet lies to them
That this is the only world you are living in

Once day you are gonna die
And the beast will be around no more
Your body is cast into the fire
You don't exist any more

You have to realize
You don't even have a life!
The sun comes up every morning
Still it is eternal night

So in the end you have nothing to lose
The signs always been there and as well to choose
And after all has been said and done
Will you remain forever the loneliest one?