Something More Besides You

Cowboy Junkies

One foot strands before the crib the other by the casket A question formed upon stilled lips is passed on but never asked

I guess I believe that there's a point to what we do But I ask myself is there something more besides you?

Two are born to cross their paths, their lives, their hearts If by chance one turns away are they forever lost?

I guess I believe that there's a point to what we do But I ask myself is there something more besides you?

This morning I awoke, the bed warm where it once was cold Small blessings laid upon us Small mysteries slowly unfold

Yet I still wonder is there a point to what we do? 'Cause I kind of doubt that there is something more besides you

Although it's hard to find the point to what we do, do I dare believe that there is something more besides you?
