Square Room

Cowboy Junkies

Sitting in a square room

My voice is freezing

And the beams that are bouncing off the moon

Are hanging from my window like icicles

Just a tired old alcoholic, waxing bucolic Shivering and homesick Staring at a wooden floor Staring at a wooden floor

Last night I nearly killed myself
Chasing rum with rum
There were crows flying all around my head
And I sure caught and ate me some

Funny how I alienated
Those who I was trying just so, so hard to impress
Now half those fuckers hate me
And I'm just a fool to all the rest

Why do I insist on drinking myself to the grave? Why do I dream about cozy coffin? I had all these plans of great things to accomplish But I end up purely pathetic more than often

Sitting in a square room My voice is freezing
