"From time to time an angel dies Kill me please, I love their cries A lonely death will be my fate Open the black evergate"

Blinded by trust, the servant tries harder The loss he had felt... The wings of his faith were burning since silence But how could he know..?

The will to ignore is always the reason for the roots of our hate Banished and banned from the twilight of heterosexuality, the servant dies harder And alone aimed towards the perfection of life Their holy crown broken Not knowing the awaiting of his death soon to come His broken life replaced by faith...

As he came up to heaven, his confidence still strong But the angels were crying No answers, no hope, no return The servant had learned ...