Alan doesn't understand her He only thinks in numbers He only drinks in restaurants Where the girls are fully covered

And he can't trust his yearnings And he doesn't like pretending His tempers stretched so much by work His heart needs gentle rending

He calls her the chocolate girl
'cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
She knows she's the chocolate girl
'cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silver

Alan doesn't understand this He says he's only human So he still lights up with old flames As if to try and prove it

And he doesn't like emotion He's not certain of their ardour If pouting causes so much fun Then breaking hearts is harder

He calls her the chocolate girl
'cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
She knows she's the chocolate girl
'cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silver

Alan doesn't understand her He thinks its getting harder So he spends the night with old friends Underneath the covers

And he talks about the chocolate girl
And how he thinks she melts when he touches her
And that she knows she's the chocolate girl
'cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silver

He calls her the chocolate girl
'cause he thinks she melts when he touches her
She knows she's the chocolate girl
'cause she's broken up and swallowed
And wrapped in bits of silver