

It's Too Late

Defiance

Well, it seems like yesterday
Young and bored, we got nothing to live for
We set out to right the wrongs
Screamed out in defiance against the things we hated
Destroyed ourselves with what we created

I thought it would never change
But some things just can't always stay the same
It's too late to change the past
And even if I could, it wouldn't change the fact
That the good times never seem to fucking last

It's too late to change the past
The good times never seem to fucking last
And now it all just seems to fade away
But tomorrow is another day

Now yesterday's a day away
We can't take back the stupid things we've said
What a shame, it's sad to say
And who would have thought we'd throw it all away
Throw it all away, what a fucking waste

It's one step forward and two steps back
That's the way it is and that's the way it's always been Too much drinking from too much thinking
We destroyed ourselves with what we created
And now everything just seems to fade away

It's too late to change the past
The good times never seem to fucking last
And now it all just seems to fade away
But tomorrow is another day

It's too late to change the past
The good times never seem to fucking last
And now it all just seems to fade away
But tomorrow is another day

But I'll never forget the times we had
The memories, some good, some bad
And the brand new faces, far off places
The friends we met, some dead and gone
It's sad to say, what a fucking shame
That things can never be the same
As time goes by we'll realize
How sad but true, nothing lasts forever
