

Sun Goes Down

Devlin

Hide to fight for my life, and nearly everything in it This ain't just lyrics I'm bringing, I'm giving you insight into a world that I live in Where if you don't stand up, man up, you might as well be dead in the seat that you sit in I switch my life from an awkward position, I wanted more... than work and still being poor

I don't need criminologists proving that young men have acted like animals lately
Ain't that what you made this for, nothing inside but hatred and war
All I ever learn from policemen, was how to kick through a door
But I retain composure, now I can't stop 'til the sun burns out

Life as you know it is over, I used to run around town Thinking of scams and plans Now you see my face on a poster, you must have thought that I was a no hoper
Or a joker

I can't let your vision be
The only part that's made for me Cause when the sun goes down I gotta be Content when I lay my head, I lay my head

Until the sun goes down, on every broken town that I'm rolling around
I'll have my heart in my palm and I'll show you my hand Cause no matter what happened you won't ever see me a broken man
My faculty grows on rations now we make dough and we share it around

I can feel a change in power, now life don't seem so sour
I used to sign on them ride on when I told myself That I weren't gonna work 'til I'm old for means to an end one more bloody hour
So, say hello to my ex boss he's still getting up at half five for a shower

Times are crazy in my world is dreams a baby
I never did think that I would have been the best MC in the whole
UK scene
'Til the sun goes down I'm a run this town like Rihanna and Jay-Z There's no stopping me now, I'm a warrior now, I'm telling you, take heed

Until the sun no longer rises
The fall of mankind, the change of climates You'll find me grinding, this life that I'm in It's full of surprises, but you'll still find them fighting

Until the sun no longer rises
The fall of mankind, the change of climates
You'll find me grinding, this life that I'm in It's full of surprises, but you'll still find them fighting
