

Car Won't Start

Donovan Woods

When I heard you two ended
My plan was to stick up my hand real quick
Let you know I was next in line
But that ain't a nice way to say it
Your hair got cut weird
My face growing old
Your trip it was miserable
The weather was cold
You came home with a lot of time alone
And no where to spend it

Up at the wedding though, she played her part
But now it's the winter and the car won't start, no
You know

My girl belongs in the heart of the world
'Cause nobody stood where she stands
Put those bags back in the car
We're taking that trip to Long Island again

Up at the wedding though, she played her part
But now it's the winter and the car won't start, no
You know

Well if you want to change your plans
Well then change your fucking plans
And if you want to say thanks, say thanks
I know it's hard, sleeping on the floor
And keeping your money from the banks
And if that thing meant nothing to you
Well then what was that one thing that one night?
That ain't a question, though it rises in inflection
It's just a nice way to say it

Up at the wedding though, she played her part
But now it's the winter and the car won't start, no
