

This Line Has Broken

Dougie MacLean

How long did you think it would take until it started to weaken

How long could you fumble and fake and not see it was beaten?

You crave for the other man's shoes

You break and you bite, you black and you bruise but

CHORUS

This line has broken

And what could have been saved has been wasted away

This line has broken

And what could have been saved has been wasted away

And you've no right to act like the child who's been lost and f orsaken

And you've no right to be angry and wild at the choices you've taken

You crave for the other man's time

You black and you bruise, you creep and you climb but

CHORUS

The wind blows on friendships young face

Look at it burning, turning, fading away

We all crave for the other man's light

We hope and we dream but we know what feels right
