

Into The Fire

Drew Seeley

You've seen her type before, she knows what she can do
There's a heat you can't ignore but it never melts her cool
And I know it for a fact - She's a pyromaniac

She lights me up to watch me burn, and still I come back
Now we're back down to the wire, know I should not play with fire
But everything she does fuels my desire
And I'm trying to get away, instead of flying into the flame
She laughs cause she knows it won't last too long when I say

This time I'll finally forget you
But I know one smile will incinerate my will to even try
Sometimes I wish I never met you
Still I jump right back into the fire, into the fire

Yeah so first time shame on her, but second time shame on me
But I know I got it bad, cause I lost track after three
It's the thing she's giving off, it's the switch I can't turn off
So smoking hot I start to choke and cough when I say

Tell me why, why every time I'm getting on track
You catch me again, then you throw me back?
And why does it feel so good to let you win?
Will you ever let me in?
