In the year when your bicycle broke You were crying in the yard But the world was a glorious game New adventures stole your heart

It will come, it will go
But you hold on to what you know

You play your part You play your part You only full for what you really want to

In the year when the future was lost You were fighting in the class Headed west with your wits and your snarl Left your parents in the past

?78 was the year you explored Tore your clothes and shaved your head Joined a band with a broken down van Thought your life was really swell

It will come, it will go
But you hold on to what you know

You play your part
You play your part
You only full for what you really want to
You only full for what you really want to

Save it all, save it all Save it, wipe your tears away Save it all, save it all Save it, wipe those tears

It has gone, it has gone
But you hold on to what you know

You play your part
You play your part
You only full for what you really want to

You play your part
You only full for what you really
Full for what you really
Full for what you really want to
