

Cost of Your Soul

Elysian Fields

Are you afraid, afraid of the dark
You're taking a dip and one slip, you're swimming with sharks
Before my eyes, words, they are swimming
If you won't, there's someone else who's willing
And the view from high up can be thrilling
You and I could surely make a killing
Won't you sign please
Ignore the conditions
The cost of your soul
Is the cost of admission
I followed a word, the word of the seasons
She whispers endure but gives me no reason
A one way trip, can just get you so far
The tissue has hardened and stiffened turning to thick scar
How can I, how I can lead them?
Dragging a stone up a hill ain't much to believe in

So I keep pushing
Some call it ambition
The cost of your soul
Is the cost of admission
If there was a town for roaming outliers
I'd be cutting a rug with you, babe instead of these wires
There once was a star that dreamed of flotation
Slept in a wine dark sea of lower sensation
God bless the trees, God bless the branches
Spread your message beyond invisible dances
Hiding your roots below ground, don't take no chances
And that star had
A premonition
The cost of your soul
The cost of admission
The cost of your soul
The cost of admission