i am left here my memories are haunting my every thought i see her frail womb stripped of it's innocence the measure of judgement i long to carry out i feel so helpless not my will but yours God i can hear you laughing your perspective comments disrespecting my love, disrespecting my love, disrespecting my headlines read victim of rape found this morning no life in her is this happening? is this happening? is it her? no God your thoughts become reality your actions unbelievable i wish i was there to help her my love pours out for her on my knees here i lay for you God build within my strength take this cup from me God i cannot bear it transform my hatred into your love why must i love them because your loved them God i embrace you (her) i embrace them unsilence my forgiveness through the word i can clearly see you love them as you love me why can't i see?