I waken to a morning mist The sun burns through an almost kiss Now gone away Not surprised to find me lonely now Parade of dreams stroll by and bow Not meant to stay I say hello there brittle and bone For sure you must be my home What's more I can always feel alone With you O it's true you are a special one Your very laugh makes my blood run Where are we now? Cemented in our city dreams Ambition like a sifting screen On an old farm plow Ah, you know that some love to love Some love to change Some have to have their own free range And some tear my heart all apart

But if loss is just a step behind
A dancing door
A circus mind
I leave my bed
And I stumble through my rituals
I fight my mind
My memory pulls
To things been said
O I admit that I
Hold to words
I hold them tight
I've known colder comfort
In the night
It's only time after all

As I waken to a morning mist
The sun burns through an almost kiss
Now gone away
Not surprised to find me lonely now
Parade of dreams stroll by and bow
Not meant to stay
But I say hello there brittle and bone
For sure you must be my home
What's more I can aIways feel alone
With you