

Hardest Chain

Firefall

You've been damaged, you've been battered and bruised, now you're Never far from your walking shoes
You wanna believe things are gonna be different
But those old ghosts come calling and you're right back in it
You've got those hell-hounds hot on your trail
And the ship that you've been waiting on never set sail
Seems like the hard times ain't never gonna end
Just reach out your hand, darling, I'll be your friend

'Cause the hardest chain to break
Is the one that's wrapped around your heart
And the hardest feeling to shake
Is the one that's tearing you apart
You need someone, you need something
And the world needs a whole more you and a little less rain
'Cause the hardest thing to take
Is your tears still filled with pain

Turn up your collar to the cold, cold wind
But you can't have that empty place you used to keep your friends
The shoes you're wearing are getting paper thin
Like the veil around your heart that holds your heart aching
Shooting stars falling at your feet
But their light seems so distant and your faith seems so weak
Somewhere in the darkness, there's a voice so sweet and free
I stood where you were standing, now lay your heart on me

'Cause the hardest chain to break
Is the one that's wrapped around your heart
And the hardest feeling to shake
Is the one that's tearing you apart
You need someone, you need something
And the world needs a whole more you and a little less rain
'Cause the hardest thing to take
Is your tears still filled with pain

You need someone, you need something
And the world needs a whole more you and a little less rain
'Cause the hardest thing to take
Is your tears still filled with pain

Hardest chain to break
And the hardest feeling to shake
You've got to break the chain, baby
And the hardest chain to break
And the hardest feeling to shake
Break the chain, baby
And the hardest chain to break
