

Be Like You Belong

Foy Vance

I still have hope
Though it failed me so
And now I'm weak where I once was strong
Time's moved on
All that was is gone
My stronghold is
I live to long

Well there is only now in the future
There's a truth you don't hear much now do you
Hold the absolute that's running through you
And be like you belong

The feelings old
Its been bought and sold
Often lost is the awe it innately holds
But songs still flow
In the heat and cold
The hunger, the harvest
The stories told

Never does it worry about the future
There's a truth you don't hear much now do you
Hold the absolute that's running through you
And be like you belong

I was leaving shores
As my heart outpoured
Confessions of hope for a love adored
I once had shunned as a smoking gun
Yet now is my rising
And my setting sun

Never should we overthink the future
There's a truth you don't hear enough now do you
Hold the absolute that's running through you
And be like you belong
