

Dissonance

From Indian Lakes

I watch you stare into the sun
Until you float away
Your thoughts they get so tangled up
Like a fly in a spiders web

They're tossing stones into the crowd
A never ending supply
They eat them up and beg for more
Like a child at a candy store

You were holding out
I was in the daylight
But now it's burning me up
You were never there
It was only one night
And now I'm back in the dark

You're all worked up you're all alone
On a Saturday night
They'll help you back inside the lines
Like a dog with a longer leash

You were holding out
I was in the daylight
But now it's burning me up
You were never there
It was only one night
And now I'm back in the dark

You're alive but all your life is gone
You're alive but all your life is gone
You're alive but all your life is gone
You're alive but all your life is gone
You're alive but all your life is gone
You're alive but all your life is gone
