

We Will

Gilbert O'Sullivan

It's over now you've had your fun get up them stairs go on quickly don't run Take off your shoes the both of you's and leave them down outside the door
turn the landing light off, no wait, leave it on it it might make the night that much easier to be gone and in the morning who'll be wide awake and eating snow flakes as opposed to those flakes (We Will) We Will (We Will) We will

That afternoon we spent the day with uncle Frank (remember?) and his wife auntie Mae well do you know since then I've received up to four letters all of which repeat the same they say thrilled to bits can't believe you came we've relived it both over time and time again and if there's ever a chance or even half you might be our way would you promise to stay (We will) We will (We will) We Will Yeah..yeah..yeah

Oh its not easy pretending that you cannot hear once you've suffered the affliction within It's no use in an ending to proclaim from the start that the moral of the story's to begin.

On Sunday next, if the weather holds, we'll have that game, but I bagse being in goal.
Not because I'm good, or because I think I should.
It's just that, well, at my age I think standing still does really suit me best. Do we all agree?
Hands up those who do. Hands up those who don't?
I see, well in that case, will we please be kind enough, if not on Sunday, to go to mass on Monday.
(We will) We will (We will) Hmm, hmm, We Will.
