

Where Did You Go To?

Gilbert O'Sullivan

There's a man, desperate time, looking for a wife
You think I'll find the right one, they'll explode
She seems like woman-like cycling in the nude
No wonder then there's yet no one to show

You can battle your [?]
Up and down the busy creek
The question though is this
With [?]

Where did you go to, who did you see?
How did you know I'd be there?
And did you remember not to forget
Tell me 'cause I don't care

If you knew the pain [?] you might know the song
But if you knew a secret, would you tell?
Seems to me for a [?] we would sell our souls
If only for the coffers it would swell

You can bless your [?] socks
All the woolly ones at least
The only problem being
[?] that you can't find the priest

So where did you go to, who did you see?
How did you know I'd be there?
Oh, and did you remember not to forget
Tell me 'cause I don't
Tell me 'cause I don't care
Don't care

Doesn't mean the world is coming to an end
Doesn't mean there won't be no [?]
If you [?]
Are you off your luck, we're all just having fun

Take your time, learn your lines, call somebody's bluff
But don't try to [?] know what I mean
Use your head, make your bet, turn the duvet round
[?] moonlight [?]

When the waiting is too long
Stretching right around the block
It's hard enough to [?]
Where it starts is where it stops

So where did you go to, who did you see?
How did you know I'd be there?
Oh, and did you remember not to forget
Tell me 'cause I don't
Tell me 'cause I don't
Tell me 'cause I don't
Tell me 'cause I don't care
Don't care
