

When Dreaming Gets Drastic

Go Radio

Can we talk just a little more like we did before
Sing it loud like it matters to you
Don't be so whoa oh oh oh, whoa
Oh no

Can this be just a little more heart and a little less consequence
So this is what you think about
But did you have to say it all out loud

And you can stay
Or give your heart to someone else
There'll always be someone here cold to lay beside me
And you can leave cut your loss and save yourself
You can find somebody else to give your worse
But let me fall asleep first

Can this song get a little dark and can it leave a mark
Can I say what I need for a change
But don't be so cold
So bold

This is aimed at what you'll say when the light gets turned out and it all feels the same
Something to sing about
Or maybe something to scream about

And you can stay
Or give your heart to someone else
There'll always be someone here cold to lay beside me
And you can leave cut your loss and save yourself
You can find somebody else to give your worse
But let me fall asleep first

She's in a tight shirt with a little bit of lipstick
And I've never felt this homesick now
As now

You know it really is a shame
Where your hearts at
I guess its something of a game
And how the key fits
And every story ends the same
Can we help it
If this was any other time, any other place we would lose it all
Anything decent
With the memory of her taste
I couldn't fix it
If I was any other boy
If this were any other time, maybe any other place I could lose it all

And you can stay
Or give your heart to someone else
There'll always be someone here cold to lay beside me
And you can leave cut your loss and save yourself
You can find somebody else to give your worse
But let me fall asleep first

You can find somebody else to give your worse
But let me fall asleep first
