

It's You, You Gotta Believe

Greg Lake

Standing alone with no place to call home,
you look for a friend,
there ain't one in the end you can turn to.
Somehow you learn to fight like a storm from the day that you're born.
You duck and you dive,
but it's all for nothing.
Nothing's for nothing.
Must realize it is just a disguise
that they wear, nobody cares.

It's you, you've gotta believe.
There's no one in there to deceive.
Turn your back to the wall,
walk tall, you've gotta believe.
There's no one in there to deceive but you.

Life is a journey, a road without end,
embedded with hearts that are broken and wasted,
time's never tasted.
Though you may search
for your dreams in the stars,
you've got to break out of the bars
to escape in the moonlight,
at the moment of midnight.
Must realize it is just a disguise
that they wear, nobody cares.

It's you, you've gotta believe.
There's no one in there to deceive.
Turn your back to the wall,
walk tall, you've gotta believe.
There's no one in there to deceive but you.

When the world is making you scream and shout,
and there is nothing left but pride.
When you're feelin' that you're down and out,
let your conscience be your guide.
There is nothing left to hide.
It can never be denied that it's you, you must believe.

Voices of madness feed us with fear,
a smile and a tear
on the face of confusion,
one more illusion.
Don't live for tomorrow, or yesterdays dream.
'Cause all that is real is what you feel
in the space of a moment.
It's all in a moment.
You must realize it is just a disguise
that they wear, nobody cares.

It's you, you've gotta believe.
There's no one in there to deceive.
Turn your back to the wall,
walk tall, you've gotta believe.

There's no one in there to deceive but you.