

A Wave Of Your Hand

Hal Ketchum

How could I know, I never saw it coming
You never know, when it's about to end
There was a place where love used to stand
You turned it into a castle of sand
Scattered and blown like the wind with the wave of your hand

There was a time we did all together
So tell me why, I'm standing here alone
There's nothing left of the love that we planned
How did this happen I don't understand
You broke my heart and my soul, with a wave of your hand

I miss your smile, the touch of your skin
Your body close to mine
Oh what I'd give just to hold you again
Say I love you one more time
Love is a game, here today and gone tomorrow

No one to blame, nothing to say or do
Here in this place where I used to stand
All that is left is this ghost of a man
Watching as you say goodbye with the wave of your hand

I miss your smile, the touch of your skin
Your body close to mine
Oh what I'd give just to hold you again
Say I love you one more time
Love is a game, here today and gone tomorrow
No one to blame, nothing to say or do
Here in this place where I used to stand
All that is left is this ghost of a man
Watching as you say goodbye with the wave of your hand
Watching as you say goodbye with the wave of your hand