

You'll Never Hurt That Way Again

Hal Ketchum

He gave you long nights full of loneliness
A heart full of little white lies
You wore a brave smile through the emptiness
But I saw right through your disguise

When it came down to the breaking up
Your past was so easy to see
You should have known that a life alone wouldn't save you from someone like me

'Cause God knows as I'm standing here
There's an angel in every tear
And I swear by all that you've been through
You just take my love and then
You'll never hurt that way again

Close your eyes and imagine this

Two hearts filled with nothing but love
You and I each and every night with nothing but heaven above

'Cause God knows as I'm standing here
There's an angel in every tear
And I swear by all that you've been through
You just take my love and then
You'll never hurt that way again

God knows as I'm standing here
There's an angel in every tear
And I swear by all that you've been through
You just take my love and then
You'll never hurt that way again

Take my love and then
You'll never hurt that way again