Who Left The Door To Heaven Open

Hank Thompson

Someone must have known that I was lonely That's why they sent you to me from above I know someone must have heard me crying And gave me such an angel that I love

Who left the door to heaven open Who turned their head for a moment Who told you that my heart was broken And who left the door to heaven open

Heaven just can't be the same without you I guess you must have been their brightest star And, tonight, I know the angels all will miss you But they know just exactly where you are
