Where Does It Go?

You can never hear the time

Headstones

If you let me go tonight, give me something I can use And if you let me go tonight, tomorrow I'll be back just as goo d as new You can never trust the rhythm

But what would you say when you were with them
Another conversation that you couldn't climb
Where does it go when it's gone and how does it end
The faces are lost scattered in the wind
Another climb lined with deterrents
Hold ourselves against it while everything around us burns

Is the dye cast in the cradle

It does what it wants

It is what it invents

That's how it operates until it stands again

It does what it wants

It is what it intends

That's how it operates until it stands again

Another line I whispered well

Meant little to me then and less to me now

Ear to the tracks the strain is in the rails
