Fear Of The Unknown

Superstition creeps within They alter what we hold in our perception Our subconscious stores the clues To what is in our mind and what is real

No one knows the reason No one has the key To unlock the door of this mystery Will we ever find out? Will we ever see? What's behind the curtain of perplexity?

So many things in life we just can't explain There is so much that's still unclear If we dare to enter the forbidden zone We'd no longer feel the fear of the unknown

Images of the unseen
Wander through our imagination
It's all so strange, the wonder of it all
Our hopes and fears, the rise and falls

No one knows the reason No one has the key To unlock the door of this mystery Will we ever find out? Will we ever see? What's behind the curtain of perplexity?

So many things in life we just can't explain There is so much that's still unclear If we dare to enter the forbidden zone We'd no longer feel the fear of the unknown

This unseen power mystifies the hour Transforms the blue skies to red The howling moon is calling As the dead of night is falling These spirits dance upon our souls

Sometimes you can feel it You might not believe it; but things happen that we can't control Nothing has changed It's still the same Unanswered questions will remain